Hoover Eulogizes Washington in Observance of 200th Anniversary

SCORES THOSE WHO PAINT HIM WITH TOO MANY FRAILTIES

Washington, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—President Hoover defended George Washington today against those who would make him too "human," and called on the nation to draw inspiration from the great patriot as "a founder of human liberty" and "the builder of a system of national life."

Mr. Hoover spoke in the rostrum of the capitol to a joint session of congress on the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of the nation's first chief executive. His speech was a straightforward eulogy of Washington, whom,

Washington, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—A brilliant and distinguished assemblage was gathered in the House chamber as Mr. Hoover began to speak exactly at 12 noon. It was the first time he had addressed a joint session, the last such occasion being five years ago when President Coolidge delivered a Washington's birthday speech.

Directly in front of the chamber, before the speaker's rostrum, sat the black-robed justice of the supreme court. To the left were members of Mr. Hoover's cabinet. The diplomatic corps, in formal morning attire, sat by.

Members of the Senate were grouped in the front tier of seats. Back of them were the members of the House.

he said substantially, needed no canonizing yet should not be painted with too many human frailties.

Defends Sublimity

Mr. Hoover said he saw no reason to canonize Washington, but had little "patience with those who undertake the irrational humanizing" of the man.

Showing impatience as he flayed the recent tendency toward "irrational humanizing," the president said:

"He had, indeed, the fine qualities of friendliness, of sociableness, of humanness, of simple hospitality; but we have no need to lower our vision from his unique qualities of greatness, or to seek to depreciate the unparalleled accomplishments of the man who dominated and gave birth to the being of a great nation."

The president waved more eloquent in defending the sublimity of Washington's character than at any other point in his address.

"Motives of men," he said, "were measured by their stature when standing in his shadow. Slander fell harmless before him, sham hung its head in shame, folly did not risk to look him in the face, corruption slunk from his presence, cowardice dared not show its quaking knees."

Points to Progress

Mr. Hoover said that "what we have need of today in this celebration is to renew in our people the inspiration that comes from George Washington as a founder of human liberty, as the father of a system of government, as the builder of a system of national life."

The president pointed to the nation's progress.

"Proudly we report to our forefathers," he said, "that the republic is more secure, more constant, more powerful, more truly great than at any other time in its history."

The president said in part: "From the room where I conduct my high office I hourly see the monument which Washington's proud and grateful countrymen have raised to his memory. It stands foursquare to the world, its base rooted steadfast in the solid substance of American soil. Its peak rises towards the heavens with matchless serenity and calm. Massive in its proportions, as was the character of Washington himself, overwhelming in its symmetry, simplicity, and sincerity, it most fittingly, beautifully, and nobly proclaims the founder of our commonwealth and our acceptance of his faith. Around that monument have grown steadily and surely the benevolent and beneficent agencies of orderly government dedicated to the spirit of Washington."

Must Fulfill Vision

"Beyond any other monument built by the hand of man out of clay and stone, this shaft is a thing of the spirit. Whether seen in darkness or in light, in brightness or in gloom, there is about it a mantle of pure radiance which gives it the aspect of eternal truth. It is a pledge in the sight of all mankind, given by Washington's countrymen, to carry forward the continuing fulfillment of his vision of America."

FAREWELL MESSAGE WASHINGTON CITED IN PRESENT CRISIS

Washington, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—The words of George Washington's farewell address were cited today by Rep. James M. Beck, Republican, Pennsylvania, to support the assertion that Washington was opposed to American isolation and in favor of helpful participation in the family of nations.

Beck spoke from the steps of the capitol after President Hoover had addressed a joint session of Congress.

"Washington," Beck said, "advised his people not to implicate themselves in the ordinary vicissitudes of European politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships and enmities."

"His reiteration of the word 'ordinary' is most significant. It implies that in extraordinary crises of civilization, America should not pursue a policy of isolation. He then recognized, and would still recognize, that elemental forces, infinitely greater than political institutions, have united the once shattered nations in a world community of purpose and action."

"He believed America could be a helpful member in the family of nations, without sacrificing its independence in decision and action."

"Such would be his policy today for, to quote his own words, he would have us 'independent of all and under the influence of none.'"

Beck said that Washington "never believed that mere readiness for war would, in itself, insure peace."

Expect Confidence Vote for New Tardieu Cabinet

Paris, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—The new government Andre Tardieu admittedly formed as a makeshift affair to last until the general elections in expected to win a vote of confidence when presented to parliament Tuesday. Tardieu hoped to put the government in office and hasten back to Geneva, where he heads the French delegation to the world disarmament conference.

ACCUSES CABINET OF USING LEGISLATION FOR HOOVER BOOM

Washington, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—Speaker of the House Garner formally declared an end today to the truce with the Hoover administration. He accused the cabinet and other spokesmen of using legislation passed only through Mr. Hoover's reelection.

Voices Undercurrent at Capitol
"The purpose is plainly to improve the president's prospects of reelection by planting the idea that he single-handed has accomplished everything that is done by congress," Garner said in a statement signaling a counter move of the democrats.

He called upon President Hoover to cooperate with the democrats, to give them credit for their cooperation, to yield to their views occasionally instead of accusing them, when they differ with him, of "playing politics."

The speaker voiced the undercurrent of democratic resentment evident at the capitol for several days.

"If he did that, he would cooperate; what he seeks instead is to dictate, and nobody can dictate to the democratic group in congress, declared the outspoken Texan, himself a candidate for the presidential nomination."

Claims Liberalization Bill

The administration, Garner said, is claiming the Glass-Steagall federal reserve and currency bill as its "triumph," whereas it is based on legislation frequently sought by democrats and "as frequently vetoed by the then republican majorities."

The robust and vigorous Texan told the president flatly that the house would not grant blanket power to reorganize the government, which Mr. Hoover asked in a message last week—authority "to appoint a lot of new officers, and make the government anything he pleases."

Plan Several Measures

Carrying out their ideas, democrats will bring before the house this week the Douglas resolution authorizing the speaker to appoint an "economy committee" of seven members who shall investigate duplication and overlapping in government bureaus and departments and report recommendations to the house.

Going further, the house expenditure committee will report favorably in a few days the Byrns bill for creating a single department of national defense by merging the war and navy departments, and take up a bill for a separate department of public works to handle public buildings and rivers and harbors projects. The administration opposes both.

Third Child Born to

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Berlin

New York, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—Irving Berlin, song writer, is the father of a 7½ pound girl born to Ellen Mackay Berlin last night at Doctors hospital. The baby girl is the third child. A boy, Irving Berlin, Jr., was born Dec. 2, 1928, but died within a few weeks. The couple later became reconciled with Mrs. Berlin's father, Clarence Mackay, chairman of the board of the Postal Telegraph company. He had opposed their marriage.

MERCHANTS PREPARE STOCKS, UNPACK NEW MERCHANDISE FOR "DOLLAR DAYS"

An old axiom applied to modern business—a penny saved is a penny earned—will be much in evidence in Brainerd Thursday and Friday of this week when merchants will declare a moratorium on regular prices to give their patrons unusual and almost unheard of values to make "Dollar Days" not only a "must" in designation but also in actuality in price.

More than a score of merchants have already signified their intention of participating in this great merchandising event. They are now preparing their stocks, unpacking new shipments of merchandise, and otherwise making their store ready to meet the influx of buyers that undoubtedly will flood their places of business during the two days of this great sales event.

Stores will bespeak the "Dollar Days" idea. Banners, streamers, pennants and other decorations have been prepared by The Daily Dispatch for all participating merchants. The idea will also be carried out further in the advertising of the various merchants through the medium of The Daily Dispatch.

St. Paul Police Seek Maniac for Series Fires

St. Paul, Feb. 2.—(U.P.)—Police and firemen today sought a maniac for a series of blazes that have been set in the Cathedral. Five fires were set in the basement of the structure yesterday. Similar fires were set last week. Firemen said that the incendiary used candles from an altar to start the fires.

Statues of 16 great Frenchmen which for nearly a century have occupied a place of honor at the chateau at Versailles, are being removed and presented to the towns of the birth of the men they represent.

Crisler Interested in University Offers

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler, athletic director at the University of Minnesota, is considering offers from the University of Wisconsin and Princeton University, it was learned today.

Crisler, who came here two years ago from the University of Chicago, is expected to go to Madison this week and then may continue on east.

LOSES LIFE FUTILE ATTEMPTS TO SAVE SISTER FROM FIRE

Minneapolis, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—Chris Mauseh, 37, dashed into a wall of flames three times before he collapsed, fatally burned, in a futile effort to save his sister, Miss Betsy Marie Mauseh, 48, in the basement of their home yesterday.

An explosion of a cleaning fluid resulted in a fire which trapped the woman in a corner of the basement. Mauseh, attracted by the explosion, sought to reach her but was unable to get through the flames. He died a few hours later. Funeral services for the two will be conducted Wednesday.

COUNTY CONVENTION REPUBLICAN PARTY SET HERE, MARCH 16

Pursuant to the call of the State Central Committee of the Republican party, the Republican convention for Crow Wing county will be held here Wednesday, March 16, at 1:30 p. m. in the farmers' room of the court house.

The purpose of the convention will be to elect delegates and alternates to the district and state conventions of the party at which district and state conventions delegates are to be elected to the National Republican convention at Chicago, June 14, for the nomination of candidates for president and vice president of the United States. Republican presidential electors for the state of Minnesota are to be nominated at the national convention.

The county convention will elect 11 representatives and 11 alternates to the state-wide Republican conference at St. Paul, Saturday, March 19.

Primaries for the election of delegates to the county convention will

Mrs. Lindbergh Tells of Attempt by Hungry Chinese to Mob Their Plane on "Mercy Flight"

New York, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—An attempt by hungry Chinese flood sufferers to mob Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's airplane on his "mercy flight" to Hingwa with medicine last summer was described in detail for the first time yesterday by Mrs. Lindbergh.

"A Chinese doctor, an American doctor, and my husband took off for the marooned city of Hingwa with several sacks of medical supplies. A plane could not carry enough food to be of any help. I had given my place to one doctor."

"In less than an hour they completed a trip which would have taken days even at a normal time by canal. When the plane landed on a flooded field outside the city walls and a sack of anti-toxins was transferred to a sampan, hundreds of Chinese began to swarm about the party, thinking the bag contained food."

"No," said the Chinese doctor, "not food—medicine." But men, women and children looked at the sack. "They don't understand," the hungry people thought. "The foreigners don't understand."

"Food," shouted the men on the outlying boats. Some old woman had the sack in her arms. Others snatched for it, climbing over into her sampan. Another group jumped into the doctor's boat."

The sampan began to sink. Mrs. Lindbergh said, and the doctor leaped to another. Finally the doctor shouted to the crowd: "Take me back. There is a large sack in the plane."

"They started to pole him back," she continued. "In the meantime the two men left in the plane were trying to keep off a pressing mob. Heavy sampans knocked against the pontoons. People clung to the wings and tail surfaces. A man was half way out of his boat in an effort to climb on board. With the doctor's return there was a general surge toward the plane, men leaving from boat to boat, toppling over each other in their efforts to get nearer."

The Chinese doctor shouted out that the engine would be started and all would be killed if they didn't get back.

"An old woman sat immovable in the front row of boats," Mrs. Lindbergh said. "What does it matter?" she asked sullenly. "We have nothing."

But the roar of the motor caused the crowd to back away. The plane soared above the milling mass of boats. "I do not know how those people felt when they saw a last hope disappear into the sky," Mrs. Lindbergh said summing up her impressions. "I know though, that I had a kind of horror that I should be so near them and have the power to escape so easily from their misery."

CARL ADAMS HOPES TO RETURN TO HIS DESK AT P. O. SOON

Carl Adams, postmaster of Brainerd, writes the Brainerd Daily Dispatch from his bed in the U. S. Veterans' hospital that he expects to return to his desk soon.

In regard to his illness he announced a desire to make the following statement:

"I left Brainerd on Feb. 10, entered the hospital here but nobody seemed to know just where I belonged as my credentials were for observation and treatment. I was sent to the receiving ward—this was not pleasing to me. I soon got in touch with a doctor of the institution who knew something about my case. I was then sent to the surgical ward—that part that applies to bone surgery. The day following I had a conference with the doctors regarding my foot. I decided that I would not attempt to reclaim the foot, hence an amputation was agreed upon to take place on Saturday, February 13. "I kept this from my friends at the time owing to conditions in my home. It has been one week today since I passed through the ordeal. For three days past now I sat up each day and today the stitches were taken from the wound. I am feeling mighty fine and expect to return home shortly to my desk."

Christian Science Reader Tells of Washington's Faith

A special service was held today by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Brainerd, as a part of the nation-wide celebration of the George Washington bicentennial.

The services included an address on George Washington by the first reader, in part, as follows: "Among all men who have attained to an equal degree of prominence, George Washington is one of comparatively few whose public and private lives are conspicuous for the presence of right and the absence of wrong. Another of Washington's traits was his intelligent devotion to unity of thought and action by the American colonies and states at times when this fundamental requisite seemed almost hopeless. Among Washington's most firmly formed traits were his faith in God and his respect for religion, even for other people's religion. Evidently, also, he had a sense of principle. For instance, when the Constitutional Convention met in 1787, and the prospect for agreement on a plan of national government seemed remote, Washington said to his fellow-delegates from Virginia, 'Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair. The event is in the hands of God.' On the whole, therefore, it can be said of George Washington that he served God and men consistently and faithfully, according to what he regarded as his opportunities, that he did this unselfishly, and that no lapse of time is likely to dim either the value or the virtue of his service."

A lesson-sermon prepared especially for this occasion was read by the first and second readers. One of the Scriptural passages contained in this lesson-sermon was from I John 4:7: "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, was as follows: "The rich in spirit help the poor in one grand brotherhood, all having the same principle, or Father; and blessed is that man who seeketh his brother's need and supplieth it, seeking his own in another's good." (Page 518).

The solo was "America the Beautiful" and the reading of the "Scientific Statement of Being" from the Christian Science textbook, its correlative Scripture, and the benediction from Jude 1:24, 25 concluded the service.

GET CIVILIZED OR PERISH!

The authorities in British East Africa, who have ordered the execution of 50 natives for the murder of an old woman who was supposed to be a witch, evidently believe that untutored tribesmen can be civilized by sheer force.

Sixty scaffolds in a row ought to make an imposing spectacle. The surviving natives, whatever their private emotions about the affair may be, will at least be impressed by the fact that the old custom of killing witches is not approved by the government.

So, in the course of time, it will happen that no more witches are killed in British East Africa. And the natives—whose mental processes will still find nothing wrong in the idea of killing witches—will, in spite of themselves, take on one more attribute of civilization.

This is all rather interesting to meditate upon, especially since all the rest of us are more or less in the same boat.

We have managed, without intending to, to get ourselves into a spot in which we must very speedily take on the customs of a higher civilization or perish.

First we mechanized the world. We made possible the production of goods on a scale infinitely greater than anything previously dreamed of. We improved transportation, so that all distances shrank to a fiftieth of their old length. We improved communication systems, so that every man had the world for a neighbor. We erected an enormously intricate and complicated financial-industrial system, so that the whole world has to stand or fall together.

Having done this, we failed to understand that a civilization of that sort could not be conducted by men and women whose outlook was just about what the mental outlook of their great-grandparents had been.

Our troubles today come chiefly from the fact that we have not yet been able to live up to this glittering new civilization. Our minds, for instance, still accept such things as ignorance, poverty, prejudice, international rivalry and war as natural features of human society—although our new civilization must inevitably go to pot unless such things are eliminated.

We stand pretty much where the African natives stand. We must get civilized or perish.

INTERNATIONAL POLICE

Senator Borah is undoubtedly entirely correct in saying that no government will give serious consideration to the French proposal for the establishment of a powerful international police force.

One need only recall the shudders that the mention of "Article X" aroused in the United States during the 1920 campaign to imagine how that proposal would be received on this side of the Atlantic. And there is little chance that people in Europe would be much more hospitable to it.

And yet, when you stop to think about it— isn't it, in its essentials, extremely logical? We want disarmament, we want some system of settling international disputes that everyone will accept, we want to "outlaw war"; isn't it, after all, perfectly sensible to propose a powerful international organization that can compel acceptance of these ideas? The French proposal is doubtless utterly impractical; but it deserves consideration, just like same.

THE NEW CHINESE SOLDIER

The course of some of the recent fighting around Shanghai will probably make some of us revise our preconceived opinions about the capabilities of the Chinese soldier.

Heretofore, Chinese armies had been considered more or less inefficient. The ease with which Japan mopped up in Manchuria strengthened that opinion. Again and again the Japanese met "armies" that outnumbered them, and again and again they routed them in short order.

But the fighting around Shanghai has been different. The Chinese have shown a surprising ability to give as good as they receive, and the job that the Japanese expected to do in a few days wasn't that kind of job.

These particular Chinese soldiers happen to be well-drilled and well-equipped. Under such circumstances, apparently, the Chinese make excellent soldiers.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES

The new football rules promulgated recently indicate that the rules committee has given its best thought to the problem of making the game safer without robbing it of its distinctive features. It will take a couple of playing seasons to show whether or not they have actually succeeded; meanwhile, it is evident that these changes would never have been necessary if the proper spirit had always been observed in the playing of the game.

The urge to win at all costs, apparently, has been largely responsible for many of the injuries that have given football such a black Rules depriving linemen of the right to use the rabbit punch, and prohibiting players from "piling up" on a ball carrier would not be necessary if coaches had uniformly taught their boys to play the game as sportsmen. The fact that these changes were needed is a direct reflection on the coaches as a group.

PILOTS SHOW INCREASE

At the close of 1931 there were more licensed airplane pilots in the United States than there were planes, a report from the Aeronautics Branch of the U. S. Department of Commerce shows. There were more than 17,700 licensed pilots, and only 10,780 planes. New York had the largest number of planes and California the largest number of pilots.

The dime-a-dance girl

By JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful ELLEN ROSSITER, salesgirl in Barclay's Department Store, lives with her extravagant mother, MOLLY ROSSITER, her elder sister, MYRA, and her young brother, MIKE. The two girls support the family. Molly foolishly spends money saved to pay the rent. Ellen decides to work at night at Dreamland, a dance hall, where she meets a man who makes up her mind to leave her mother and sister and live with him.

STEVEN BARCLAY, a man 37 and Ellen's employer, sees a girl crying and discovers the situation. He offers to give Ellen a dress but she proudly refuses. He then loans her a dress from the store. Ellen is half-pleased, but frightened by her wealthy employer's obvious interest in her. But she forgets him entirely when at Dreamland she meets handsome LARRY HARROWGATE, an artist whose prospect in his own phrase, is exact nothing. She accepts Larry's invitation to tea the following day. Her mother is already planning that Ellen shall capture Barclay, which exasperates the girl. She says nothing of the meeting with Larry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

THE initial excitement over Steven Barclay's flowers and Steven Barclay's intentions simmered down a little as breakfast progressed. For one thing, Mike with his clamorous demands for "More toast, Ellen" and "Just a little teeny bit of your coffee, Mom," made any sustained discussion impossible. But after he had gulped his food and scampered away, Molly was at the fascinating topic again. She went straight to the main issue.

"Mr. Barclay is a bachelor, isn't he, Ellen?"

"I don't know and don't care," Ellen answered on a note of rising resentment. "Oh, dear! I'm sorry," she apologized, as tears welled up in Molly's eyes. "I didn't mean to be rude. I just hated being made a Roman holiday. I think he's a widower."

"Gress," supplied Myra. "He's been married twice. I don't know what happened to his first wife but he divorced the second one—got a Mexican divorce. The papers were filed of it at the time." Myra concluded self-consciously. "The second Mrs. Barclay was Leda Grayson—that notorious dancer. There was a terrible scandal."

"Oh," said Molly uncertainly. She was dashed. "Then that's different."

"It wasn't his fault," Ellen put in suddenly, reluctantly compelled to come to Steven Barclay's defense. "I remember the whole story now. It was all a woman's fault."

"I should say it was her fault," Myra commented warmly. She amplified her statement. "Leda Grayson cheated from the first but Mr. Barclay was chivalrous enough to get a divorce in Mexico—incompatibility or something. Everything was settled in secret but they say she got $10,000,000 for taking back her maiden name. Nobody criticized him at all."

"That's good. Then everything's all right," sighed Molly, relieved and not ashamed to show it. "I felt sure he wouldn't have shown Ellen attention if things hadn't been all right."

"What are you trying to do?" asked Ellen in a tone which she hoped hid her annoyance. "Make me Steven Barclay's third wife on the strength of a few flowers?"

"You can talk like that, young lady, but you can't fool your mother," Molly declared in her airy assumption of sophisticated maturity. "Flowers might mean nothing from a young boy. But an older man doesn't do things like that and you know it. You're only trying to throw dust in my eyes."

"I'm sorry I said such things," Ellen began in a choked voice.

ELLEN was furious. She was conscious all the time that she was being ill-natured and ungracious, conscious that she was blaming Steven Barclay because his flowers were not from another man, blaming him, as well, for her mother's foolishness. But she could barely restrain herself from rushing from the table when Molly began to plan for future engagements with Barclay.

"You'll need two or three light little dresses for evening," she was saying. "Luckily it's summer and you can wear anything. I do wish your Aunt Myra would send another box. It's about time for one."

"What are you thinking of, mother?" Ellen protested in a vain attempt to check the tide. "You're making tremendous plans on nothing at all. I won't have it!"

"Well," responded Molly, hurt. "If you don't want us to share your pleasures with you—why I guess—" Ellen was suddenly remorseful. Mother was mother, delightful, feather-headed, irresponsible. There was no need to destroy her gaiety. As she comforted her, Ellen's amused tolerant look went to meet Myra's self-conscious eyes. And she saw with an unpleasant shock that steady, sensible Myra, for once, had sided against her. Myra believed she had been deliberately coquettish.

Molly readily forgave the grave injury that Ellen had done her. The easy tears dried and she was laughing, sparkling again.

"You'd better be good to me," she gayly rebuked Ellen. "I've a surprise I've been keeping for you. Yesterday after you telephoned about not having the right dress I went out and bought you a lovely printed chiffon with the cunningest little jacket that you take off when you dance."

There was an appalled silence. Molly added nervously, defensively, "It was a great bargain and since we didn't have enough money to pay the rent anyway, why, I thought—"

"Oh, mother," wailed Myra, "can't you see there's no point at all in Ellen's working herself to death at Dreamland if all the extra money is to go for her clothes?"

"But now she can return the other dress to Mr. Barclay and start out right with him," argued Molly. "It'll come in handy anyhow. You'll see. Things are starting to happen to Ellen. No one knows how long she'll have to work anyway."

Ellen saw her way clear at last. "I love working at Dreamland," she said. "It's not work. It's fun there. I want to keep on. I met someone—well, anyway I wouldn't give up going there for anything," she finished confusedly.

AS Myra and Molly, their argument forgotten, turned their startled eyes on her she was conscious that she was blushing.

There was a long silence in the cluttered dining room where the sunshine, already growing hotter, trickled through curtains of cheap theatrical gauze and above on the fine old mahogany table where two pretty girls sat with their pretty, dark mother.

Ellen, the soft flush receding from her cheeks, was thinking of Larry Harrowgate—his gray eyes and his quick, infectious laugh, the way he had said he was glad he had found her. She was thinking that she would see him soon, soon.

Scatter-brained Molly, rebellious and alarmed, was thinking too. Something had arisen to menace the bright fancies she had been weaving. What was there to say? What was there to do? A certain hardness in Ellen's square flushed jaw warned her that tears would be useless. So she held her silence.

Myra's thoughts were darting from Bert to Ellen. She was remembering the way she had loved Bert in the beginning, was remembering the way that love had faded with endless waiting. Surely Ellen could not in the brief space of one night have met another Bert. Surely life could not be so cruel just when it had seemed things were to be easier, just when she admitted honestly, it had seemed that Ellen had at last met the man who was to rescue them all.

"Did you mean anything special, Ellen?" Myra spoke at last with effort and hoped that Ellen's tearing laugh would prove her wrong. But Ellen did not laugh.

"No, I didn't mean anything special," she replied uncomfortably, after an appreciable pause.

"That's why you weren't pleased over the flowers, isn't it?" Myra persisted. "It was because you met someone you liked better last night at Dreamland? You spoke of meeting someone there. It was a man, wasn't it, a man that you liked?"

Her breath rose and fell on a long sigh.

"Yes, I did," Ellen replied defiantly, her bright, hostile eyes moving from her sister to her mother and back again. "Furthermore, I hope you and mother will be kind enough to let me handle my own affairs. I don't meddle in yours."

"I'm sorry, dear."

"Don't 'dear' me!" burst out Ellen furiously. "You and mother—both of you—make me sick. We're dead. All right, I can recoup the family fortunes by trying to trap a rich man into marriage. That's a fine and honorable solution. That's just great! It makes no difference what I—"

SHE burst unexpectedly into tears and rushing from the table ran into the bedroom and flung herself upon the bed. When Myra followed and sat down on the bed she refused to speak except to insist hysterically that she be left alone.

"Listen to me," Myra pleaded tearfully, resisting Ellen's efforts to force her away. "Listen now. You'll cry yourself sick. I'll be crying now."

"You've spoiled everything," Ellen sobbed, her voice muffled by pillows.

"We couldn't. Not if you feel as I think you do. Mother and I were wrong and selfish. But we didn't understand, didn't know how it was. How could we? It's breaking my heart that you think I'm such a brute."

They had shared every emotion, every thought, almost every action from babyhood. Soon they were in each other's arms, crying together and then laughing. Ellen wiped her streaming eyes and swung her feet over to the floor.

"I must look a fright," she said shakily.

She went to the mirror to examine her reddened eyes. She began vigorously to dab on powder, conscious that Myra, crosslegged on the bed and still somewhat tearful, was watching.

"I'm sorry I said such things," Ellen began in a choked voice.

"You were perfectly right. You should have been angry. I didn't realize, and I know mother didn't, how selfish we were being."

"No, it was my fault," insisted Ellen, eager now for her share of the blame. "I don't know what got into me. Thank goodness it's over now."

The ugliness of the scene in the dining room was forgotten. The sisters were friends again. Presently Myra spoke lightly of the young man Ellen had met at Dreamland. What was his name? What was his name?

Thus the first storm of a day that was to prove memorable for Ellen Rossiter passed away.

Thoughts for Lent

"The King of Glory Shall Come In" (Read Psalm 24.)

There come hours of high exaltation to those who are spiritually receptive. Such periods are not often of long duration, but they leave a profound and lasting impression. It is for such time of supreme experience that we are prepared by the patient cultivation of religious capacity through prayer and meditation. Then, in an instant of illumination, we know what it is to be lifted up in soul, as the gates and doors are lifted in the wall of a city, that the King of Glory may come in.

Prayer: O Thou art great and high and glorious, give us patience to prepare ourselves for Thy coming, through meditation upon the truths which are eternal. Then, the discipline being accomplished and our hearts ready, enter we pray, that we may receive Thee in Thy Glory and be kindled by the holy flame of Perfect Love. This we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Daggett Brook Ladies to Meet in Brainerd

North Prairie—The Daggett Brook Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. T. H. Harris, Northeast Brainerd, on Thursday, Feb. 25.

The Poultry club met with Mrs. Ben Grieson Friday, Feb. 19. Mrs. Ole Anderson and Mrs. Grieson are the leaders.

All of the LeRoy Sewell family have been on the sick list the past week. A number of men of this community attended the creamery meeting in Brainerd Tuesday.

The Robert Harris and Steve Tougas families spent Monday evening at the James Grieson home.

Elmer Peterson recently purchased and installed a milking machine.

There was no school on Feb. 18 and 19 on account of the Teachers Institute in Brainerd on those days. Feb. 22 is a holiday so there will be no school until Feb. 23.

Feb. 24 the regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be held.

THE OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of the Daily Dispatch:

It seems that the farmers of Crow Wing as well as in a number of other counties in the state have made a rather abortive attempt to get tax reduction. Judging from the result of some of these meetings either the farmers had mighty dumb leaders, or salaried people and others of fixed incomes controlled the meetings. Farmers as well as others should understand that real tax reduction to be worthwhile must begin at home. Probably the school is where the greatest tax burden is felt. Take our own district that has jumped from 7½ mills to over 28 mills, for example.

Farmers should also understand that if the county commissioners are to make very much reduction in county expenditures, those expenditures are likely to be cut where the farmer gets the greatest benefit from his tax dollar. In several of the counties where tax reductions were asked or demanded, the road fund was the first to be slashed, and the next almost invariably was other activities designed especially for rural benefit, such as county nurse, county agent, extension work, county engineer, etc.

I believe that most farmers thought and felt that under the changed conditions of late years salaried officials were overpaid as compared with their own reduced incomes.

Understand that all elective offices carry salaries fixed by statute, and the commissioners have nothing whatever to do with those expenses, except as hereafter stated.

In all the counties asking tax reductions, I have read of but two where salaries were reduced, and in those, the reduction was by voluntary action of the officials.

As near as I am able to learn the commissioners have but little control over expenditures other than those mentioned, except the expenditures in the offices of county officials, and the traveling and other expenses of the appointive officials, and as stated before, the latter's salaries, the county fair and publicity campaign.

I believe the excellent policies, in general, of both the president and our governor slipped a cog when they advised against salary or wage reduction. It has greatly hindered, in my humble opinion, the necessary adjustment that must come, before all may become prosperous again.

Nor do I believe it will take 50 years to get back onto the higher scale of wages, if once reduced," as the president of the American Federation of Labor claims. Rather, I believe it will take a much longer time than that to bring prosperous times for all, if some sort of adjustment is not made. In this connection it may be well to give heed to Senator Couzen's warning in a recent interview, in which he said, "That adjustment must come, or something worse will," and it won't be 50 years either.

As stated before, commissioners under pressure look for places to reduce expenses and it seems that the most vulnerable place—the country roads. Then come farmers living along roads already completed or nearly so join in the "holler" to stop road work.

Wonder if such a one can realize what an exceedingly greedy, selfish position he has taken?

When the Babcock system of road building was first promulgated, it was stated that first the main arteries or highways would be built, then the county roads, and then the township side roads and by-ways, as feeders. We all know the two first have been pretty well taken care of and now for any man living on those roads to holler for a halt in road building only shows how unjust and unfair some can be. If such a course is adopted, it is my opinion we'll hear from it.

We all know that the dollar has greatly appreciated—the latest statement says 49 per cent, so that a salary man getting $3,000 four years ago is getting now the equivalent of nearly $4,500 and that in the face of a 22 per cent reduction in living cost according to the same authority. Now compare that with the measly average income of the farmer of $367, and one can understand why the farmer hollers for tax reduction and why they think it almost criminal for the county authorities to pay any man from two to three thousand a year and his expenses, be he an engineer or otherwise.

J. W. HILLIARD,
R. R. No. 8.

To the Editor of the Daily Dispatch: I read with great satisfaction in your paper last night, in the Open Forum space, the letter written by the gentleman who signed his name as Sandy.

I think if more people would express their opinions openly, through the paper, in regard to what they think, these eternal commissions that are being appointed every so often and for which the taxpayer is to stand the bill, there would be less of these slip operations.

You take, for instance, the Wickersham investigation, which cost the taxpayers over a million dollars and after which, when the report was ready, didn't mean a thing in fact.

PURDUE, ON TOP IN BIG 10, FACES INDIANA

VANQUISHES CATS TO ASSUME LEAD BY 48 TO 33 SATURDAY

Chicago, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Purdue, on top for the first time this season, hoped to strengthen its slim lead in Big Ten basketball by vanquishing Indiana tonight.

The Boilermakers grabbed the lead when they trounced Northwestern 45-33 at Lafayette Saturday night. The Wildcats, title defenders, had been in first place since the season started. Purdue now has six victories and one defeat.

Co-captains Johnny Wooden and Harry Kellar, who scored 25 points for Purdue, led the attack which swamped Northwestern.

A victory over Indiana would put the Boilermakers two games ahead of the field, with four remaining.

Northwestern must defeat Michigan at Ann Arbor tonight to stay in the running for the title. The Wolverines were whipped by Illinois, 29-22, Saturday night.

Chicago remained in the cellar position, now tied with Wisconsin, although it upset Ohio State 29-26 Saturday night in the biggest surprise of the week. The crippled Badgers lost their sixth game of the season, 43-17, against Minnesota.

Illinois swamped the Wolverines' title hopes by administering their third defeat of the season, 29-22. Huddy Helmich counted eight field goals to lead the Illini attack.

Indiana won in the final minutes of Saturday night's game with an Iowa sophomore squad, 34-33. They will have the home floor advantage over their faster Hoosier state rivals, Purdue, tonight.

The standings:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Purdue	6	1	.857
Northwestern	7	2	.778
Minnesota	6	3	.667
Michigan	5	3	.625
Illinois	5	3	.625
Indiana	4	5	.444
Ohio State	4	5	.444
Iowa	2	7	.222
Chicago	1	6	.143
Wisconsin	1	6	.143

Saturday night's results:
Purdue 48, Northwestern 33.
Minnesota 45, Wisconsin 17.
Illinois 29, Michigan 22.
Indiana 34, Iowa 33.
Chicago 29, Ohio State 26.

This week's games:

Tonight
Purdue at Indiana.
Chicago at Wisconsin.
Northwestern at Michigan.

Saturday Night
Michigan at Iowa.
Purdue at Wisconsin.
Indiana at Minnesota.
Chicago at Ohio State.

"GOOSE HANGS HIGH" PRESENTED TUESDAY

The "Goose Hangs High" Junior class play, will be presented tomorrow evening in the high school auditorium after delay caused by illness of members of the cast.

Robert Ebert and Alice Rochford as Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ingals, supported by Virginia Wilson, Howard Zander and Robert Jackson as their children and Frances Reese as the proud grandmother, play the leading roles in the play.

The play was shown as a motion picture in Brainerd some time ago. It is a typical story of modern youth leading to an exciting climax and a surprise ending.

A matinee will be staged tomorrow afternoon for the benefit of school children. The curtain will go up at 4 o'clock.

DEMPSEY BEATEN BY KINGFISH EX-CHAMP'S COMEBACK RUDELY HALTED BY HARD-HITTING YOUNG CHICAGO HEAVY

You might have known it was coming, for "they never come back"—very far. Jack Dempsey, the old Man Mauer with young ideas, found King Levinsky's youth, punch and stamina too much for an old guy to handle. Levinsky won an unofficial decision from the ex-champion in their four-round exhibition in Chicago between more than 23,000 paid admissions, a record indoor fight attendance. This picture shows Levinsky, left, jolting Dempsey with a left to the head. The third man is Referee Ed Purdy.

HAMLIN NEEDS ONE DETERMINATION TO VICTORY TO CINCH BEAT RANGERS RUNS LOOP CHAMPIONSHIP HIGH WITH WARRIORS

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Hamline university's basketball team needs only a victory tonight over Gustavus Adolphus at St. Peter in a Minnesota conference game to assure the Methodists of this season's title.

With only three games remaining, the undefeated Hamline five needs only one of them to remain in the standing column above St. Thomas, which already has lost two games, one of them to Hamline. Next Saturday night Hamline will play Macalester and on March 2, the final game with St. Thomas is scheduled.

The Methodists won by the margin of 32 to 21 from St. John's last Saturday night. St. Thomas, in second place, defeated Macalester, 20 to 26, while Concordia slipped from its tie in the standings with the Tommies when it lost a game to St. Olaf, 29 to 22.

Another test of the leaders will be Wednesday when St. Thomas and Concordia battle at Moorhead. If the Cobbers can win on their home floor, a tie for second place will result.

On Tuesday night, Macalester will journey to St. Olaf and on Friday the only conference game scheduled is Gustavus and St. John's at Collegeville. Beside the Hamline-Macalester game next Saturday, another conference contest between Gustavus Adolphus and Concordia at Moorhead will be held.

The conference standings:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Hamline	8	0	1.000
St. Thomas	6	2	.750
Concordia	5	3	.625
Gustavus Adolphus	3	5	.375

MERCHANTS ENGAGE Breaks I. B. A. Record to Take Bowling Honors

St. Paul, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Hank Marino, Milwaukee, today held first place of the singles and first place in all events of the annual International Bowling association with 2,082 after breaking all I. B. A. records with a score of 760 yesterday.

In Princeton, Brainerd meets an aggregation of cage stars comparatively stronger than any of its former victims. Princeton and Brainerd each hold the honor of being the only teams in Minnesota to defeat the Harlem Globe Trotters.

NORGE CLUB ENTRY WINS SKI HONORS

Red Wing, Minn., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Guttor Paulson, representing the Norge Ski club, Chicago, was the new Central Ski association champion after a victory over Caspar Oimen, Canton, S. D., leading American skier in the winter Olympic games.

Paulson won the title here at the annual central meet under springlike weather conditions as a crowd of 15,000 looked on.

He scored 216.9 points with jumps of 144 and 168 feet to break the high record set in the national meet. Peter Falstad, Canton, S. D., was second with 213.6 points. He was followed by Leonidas Batson, Canton; G. Gundersen, Ogden Dune, Chicago; H. Strand, Beiring Springs, Mich.; A. Bakken, Norge Ski club, Chicago, and Leo Peterson, Minneapolis.

In class B, George Koserek, Duluth, was first and G. Pence, Minneapolis, second. Clare Bergstrom, Minneapolis, was first in class C, with H. Jansen, Norge Ski club, Chicago, second.

H. Overby, Hudson, Wis., led class D, followed by F. Haltiner, St. Paul. Floyd Elkison, St. Olaf college student and entry in the winter Olympics, won the cross-country event by two minutes.

Five of the Americans entered in the Olympic ski events participated in the meet. Oimen was injured in his first jump and forced out.

RED DEVILS TROUCE STAPLES 6 TO 0 FOR 8TH STRAIGHT WIN

Colder weather today improved the ice at the south side Brainerd rink and made playing conditions better for the hockey game between Brainerd and Crosby-Ironton this afternoon.

Playing on slushy ice Sunday afternoon the Brainerd Red Devils whitewashed the Staples sextet by the score of 6 to 0. Good hockey was out of the question due to the poor ice.

The Brainerd team has the enviable record of eight wins and no losses this season. Next Sunday the Red Devils will meet Aitkin on the local ice.

WARMUP GAMES ARE SCHEDULED TONIGHT

To permit Class B cage teams to work out on the Brainerd gym before the opening of their tournament at Staples Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, Motley and River-ton will meet in a game here tonight at 7 o'clock and Brainerd will fill in as an opponent for Verdale at 8 o'clock.

The district tournament will take place in Brainerd March 3, 4 and 5. As the pairings now stand, Brainerd plays Aitkin in the opening game of the tournament with Crosby-Ironton playing Wadena. In the process of eliminations, if Little Falls and Staples each win over Class B winners, and Brainerd and Crosby-Ironton win their opening games, Brainerd will meet Staples and Crosby-Ironton will play Little Falls in the semi-finals.
